No Tardiness In Heaven.

This pathetic incident comes from Chicago public school circles, where it is talked of in hushed tones. A child lay sick unto death in a populous part of the big city, and every sound made her start from sleep, or alarmed her when awake. The motto on her pillow, embroidered by loving hands, "Schlafen sie wohl," lost its power to soothe, and the whistle of the cars, the rumble of street traffic and the ringing of bells was torture to her failing nerves.

One bell in particular caused her the keenest anxiety--the bell that every morning summoned her to her beloved school, and for which she had always listened with happy expectation. Now that she could no longer obey it, she was unhappy when it rung and her parents thought of a scheme to restore her health and give her the rest and quiet she needed.

They took her to friends living on a farm in Nebraska--beyond the reach of railroad whistles and school bells, where the silence of nature was profound, and in that gracious atmosphere the child improved so rapidly that all danger was believed to be past.

But it was not. One morning she awakened at sunrise and called the family about her.

"Listen," she said, raising one thin hand to command attention, "the bell--the dear bell! Hear it ring! Hurry! hurry! I will be late for school!"

And while they listened for that dear remembered bell which she alone heard her eyes closed and all the lessons were said.
